Critics' choice: Volker Hueller

By Jackie Wullschlager

Volker Hueller
Timothy Taylor Gallery
London W1

Hueller, aged 34, is one of Germany's rising stars: an artist of decorative beauty whose work is full of dark undercurrents. This first solo UK show concentrates on portrait and landscape prints, made from a process of acid etching and hand application of faded watercolour and shellac. They look at once contemporary in their fragmented, mixed media surfaces and witty cultural references, and historically resonant in echoes of German expressionist uses of the medium.
