

Eleven Rivington

Published December, 2011

JERONIMO ELESPE

This Spanish painter creates small oil paintings using tiny brushstrokes on aluminum panels. The subjects—portraits, elements from his surroundings—are equally intimate and are culled from the artist's memories. He'll work on his paintings for months and even years, making each an accretion of time as well as paint.